A Resident Known to all Our Readers Relates an Experience.

Readers of the Avalanche have been told again and again of the merits of that reliable, time-proven kidney remedy—Doan's Kidney pills. The experiences told are not those of unknown persons, living far away. The cases are Grayling cases, told by Grayling people.

W. A. McNeal, Chestnut St., says:

"Sometimes my kidneys have been out of order causing the kidney secretions to pass too frequently. Colds settled on my kidneys, also. I have used Doan's Kidney pills, which I get at Olson's Drug store, at these times, and they have always strengthened my kidneys and cured me of the attack."

Price 60 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney pills—the same that Mr. McNeal had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

INVESTIGATED LOCAL HEALTH AFFAIRS

A STATE MEDICAL INSPECTOR MEETS WITH OFFICIAL LOCAL ORGANIZATIONS.

At a request from the local health department the State Board of health sent Dr. Hill, who officially is known as the "State Medical Inspector" to Grayling to look into conditions due to the presence of several cases of smallpox in our city.

Dr. Hill arrived Wednesday morning and with Health Officer Peter E. Johnson visited Mercy hospital where the smallpox cases are being cared for. These are not confined in the hospital proper, but instead are in the brick garage in the rear of the main building.

The original case came to the hospital from Gaylord and at the time of arrival of the patient the disease had not developed sufficiently for the physicians to determine that it was smallpox. As soon as smallpox was found to be the disease the patient was removed to the garage and placed in charge of a special nurse. In the meantime the nurse caring for the man, and a mother and little child that had visited the man in the hospital came down with the disease. These were placed under careful quarantine to prevent further exposure.

Dr. Hill stated that the cases had been handled in a fit and capable manner but that there is still a chance of it being spread. The first original case has been discharged but the three above mentioned remain and these are under strict quarantine. The hospital, said Dr. Hill, is in excellent sanitary condition.

At 10:00 o'clock a. m. the County Board of supervisors, Grayling township board and the Village council convened in the Court house and were addressed by Dr. Hill.

Mayor H. Petersen introduced the speaker and the first thing the latter did was to explain to the gentlemen present just what his official position was. He is not a member of the State board of health, but is appointed State Medical Inspector, and has powers of the local boards and State boards combined, and acts in advisory capacity of local affairs.

He stated that somebody was responsible for the coming of the original case of smallpox to Grayling. The disease came from some place, but where? Who is to blame? The doctor said somebody was to blame. He said that diseases must be stopped in the first case and not let them get started.

He emphasized the fact that anyone knowing that they are infected with a contagious disease MUST report it to the health officer. He said that the penalty for neglecting to do this is a fine of $1,000 and ninety days in jail. The need of reporting such diseases, he said, is very imperative. This duty is not only upon the doctor but upon the householder himself.

In quarantined cases where supplies are provided the health officer is held responsible for the payment of the same, and that the county need not pay any bills incurred under O. K'd by the health officer. Such accounts as are incurred by the health officer, that official is responsible for, and he turns them over to the County clerk for payment.

The County board of supervisors, acts as an auditing committee and determines whether or not the individual is an indigent person or not, and if the latter the bills are placed in the hands of the prosecuting attorney of the county for collection. This latter matter brot out considerable discussion and there were some differences of opinion and much resorting to the statutes for authoritative information. One main point was made plain and that was that unless a bill of supplies was ordered by the health officer the county cannot be held liable for payment of same.

Dr. Hill advocated the providing of a contagious hospital by each township. In speaking of the employment of a public nurse he stated that a trained nurse that knew her business could save the amount of her salary many times over in the teaching of how to keep healthy and well and how to avoid diseases and to treat existing diseases.

The meeting was a lively one and the discussions revealed matters in a much more clear light to the people here in our municipality, and left a better understanding of the importance of complying with the health laws as laid down by the state legislature. That the health officer has tremendous authority there is no doubt and that he should be a man of stern determination and well balanced reason.

HOW GAYLORD PROPOSES TO GET RID OF KICKERS.

One of the "liabilities" of every community is the knocker, the man who because he hasn't gumption enough to be alive to his opportunities or who is just naturally a whiner and faultfinder. These men are never a help to any community and they frequently injure it more than the public knows by their complaints and their fault finding over conditions which either exist only in their own minds or which could be remedied by a little exertion on their own parts.

Otsego county, a live county with a bunch of live wires, has adopted a plan to get rid of this class of undesirable men who keep them away forever, and the plan is well worth copying by others.

The officers of the Gaylord board of trade are men who believe that more is to be gained by boosting the things which Otsego now has than by chasing after factories which, too often, will fit the buyer for your property and won't charge a cent for the service. The only condition is that as soon as you have sold you are to get out of Otsego county and stay out, and you must give us a written agreement that you will do so.

The Gaylord board of trade believes thoroughly in the opportunities which that county offers to the farmer, the stock raiser and the dairyman. In the first place it is a natural grass country and with good climatic conditions and excellent water, it is primarily adapted to the raising of sheep and cattle. At several points large interests are going into the raising and grazing of sheep and cattle and many of the smaller farmers are finding that dairying offers a splendid opportunity, the creamery at Gaylord offering a first class market price for their product.

And then there is Otsego county's fame as the grower of the "finest potatoes in Michigan," which are shipped all over the United States and are sought after by all commission houses dealing in the best products. Pretty nearly every farmer in Otsego county depends on his potato crop for a large part of his cash receipts each fall and they are often raised in such quantities that the first crop will not only pay for the land on which it was grown, but also pay the cost of clearing the land, of planting, caring for and harvesting the crop and leave a good profit in addition. It is a matter of record that good farmers have bought wild land, cleared it and planted potatoes, and paid all of these costs from a single year's crop.

KINDERGARTEN HELPS FOR PARENTS

This is No. 38 of the second series of articles issued by The National Kindergarten Association, 8 West 40th St., New York. They are appearing weekly in these columns. YOUR CHILD'S FIRST INTEREST IN PICTURES.

(By Dr. William Byron Forbush.)
"It hasn't got him yet!" was the little boy's delighted report each day after looking in his nursery book and discovering that the crocodile in the picture had not yet caught up with the picaninny whom he was chasing. "Why don't they get to church?" was another youngster's inquiry after he had turned for several weeks to Broughton's "Pilgrims Going to Church," and wondered why they did not arrive.

A third child put his hand protectively over the pictured figure of a kid, to shield it from an eagle; and another child of kindergarten age has been known to try to feed a pictured animal.

These incidents suggest the rather surprising fact that to a small child pictures are not merely symbols, but a part of his living world. At first he notes the similarity between the household pet and the pictured cast more than he does the difference and it is a long time before he grasps the idea that the latter is only a symbol.

It is perhaps a little disheartening to us adults, to whom pictures have opened a world of beauty, to realize that it is their usefulness and not their beauty which appeals to children up to 6 or 7 years of age. To them, pictures are simply something to play with. They prefer to have them little because they can handle them more easily. For any practical end they do not differ distinguishably from their dolls.

Ninety-nine per cent of the first drawings of children are said to include the human face. Their affections for ready made pictures are similar; they like living creatures, people and animals and birds, and they like them best in action. They like only story pictures.

It is somewhat surprising to investigators to discover that, in their earliest interest in pictures, children do not seem to have any marked preference for the colored ones, though later they exhibit an interest in bright crude colors.

In general, they are not curious as to details. They will not notice that a figure is armless, and as we know so well, their own first drawings often have two eyes or ears on the same side of a face. Yet they do seem to single out the eye as an object of peculiar interest. Did you ever have your two-year-old try to stick his forefinger in your eye? Little children often attempt the same with a pictured eye.

The educational lessons which we learn from these primitive tastes are plain, and since, to the small child, a picture is "the real thing" we should select his pictures, as we do his other toys, to help him in his little world of experience. They should represent the kind of people and pets whom he should love, engaged in activities which he can understand. Simple incidents, playful, jolly and unselfish, should be our choice, without reference to their esthetic purpose.

While we need not strive to select great art, we may choose clear, strong color and simple, well-drawn action. Thus we can lay foundations for appreciation of the beautiful.

Above all, each picture should suggest a good story, and we should give the story with the picture.

Help to reach all the parents of the country by cutting this out and passing it on to a friend.

Mute Misled Teeth.

An elderly man, who later was found to be a mute, rushed into a Kansas City police station one night recently, and indicated he had swallowed his false teeth. The man apparently was in great pain, and an ambulance was called and he was sent to Bethany hospital.

At the hospital surgeons quickly examined the man. Other surgeons were called into consultation. Most of the night the surgeons worked with the patient, probing far down his throat in an effort to give relief. X-ray pictures were made in an effort to locate the lost articles, but they did not disclose their whereabouts.

The next day while surgeons still were working over the man, he called for paper and pencil and wrote:

"I was drunk last night, and may have lost them."

Kitty, My Pretty White Kitty

By S. B. HACKLEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"The house is full up, sah." The shining, white-aproned embodiment of suavity and importance, on the steps of the high-class boarding house of the Misses Lovejoy, in the little health resort town of Boiling Springs, bowed until his clipped head well-nigh touched the elusive pink spider lilies in the flower boxes beside the piazza steps. "I has to ostend to you de intensist regrets o' my ladies, but ebuh room is taken. De last one wah bespoke by wah dis foahnoon."

When a man all his fifty years gets everything he wants and goes 700 miles on his physician's recommendation of the water and baths for a rheumatic knee, he naturally feels vexed when, at his journey's end, he doesn't get the first of his wishes granted.

Torry Alderson's fine dark eyes clouded a bit as he turned away and started across the high sloping street toward the Coppell house, recommended as the second best boarding house in Boiling Springs.

And just then "Miss Nellie," a little, slim, Auburn-haired and smiling lady about thirty-five years of age, with the gentlest, softest brown eyes, came up the street. Alderson met her at her gate. His face cleared instantly, and when she stooped to pat the immense white cat that advanced to meet her, with "Kitty, pretty white kitty, are you glad to see me?" on her lips, an unconscious twinge of jealousy went over him. Why should a beautiful creature like that waste affection on a cat?

That evening Alderson sat on the upstairs porch that opened off his room at Mrs. Coppell's, and in the full light of the moon he watched Miss Nellie Lovejoy as she stood by the row of sweet-scented daturas, whose great, dew-covered white bells made a glory of the Lovejoy side yard. Then he saw her stoop and pat the white cat that followed her.

"I wouldn't mind being that cat," he thought whimsically.

The next afternoon, coming from the bathhouse at the springs, some distance from the boarding place, Alderson overtook Miss Lovejoy going home from her work as a clerk at Framm's store. He spoke to her, and making a pretense of desiring some information, walked along with her as far as her gate.

Ten days of religiously drinking the mineral waters and taking the baths and Alderson's rheumatic knee was nearly well, but he was having strange feelings in the vicinity of his heart.

He had never cared anything for women as he knew them in the North, but he had never before been acquainted with an unburnt Southern lady, with a voice like soft, rippling water and eyes like pools in the forest.

Boxes of roses began quite frequently to come down on "No. 11," the late afternoon train, from the nearest big town for Miss Nellie Lovejoy, and fancy wicker boxes of chocolates with number, with "T. M. Alderson's" card inclosed.

And Miss Nellie glowed and dimpled and smiled until the Framm customers, who had always loved her, fairly worshipped her.

And in the seventh heaven of delight Jonathan received the boxes of candy and flowers, and watched through the front door screen each afternoon the gentleman from Detroit, as he lingered at the gate, loath to lift his hat from his handsome gray head in good-by to Miss Nellie.

About three o'clock one morning of the fifth week of his stay in Boiling Springs Alderson was awakened by a "meowling" in the back yard. For an hour there was a continuous squalling. When the cat finally ceased its noise Alderson, who loved late sleeping, could sleep no more. He rose thoroughly exasperated.

The next night there was a repetition of the feline serenade. Alderson bounded from his bed and saw in the yard below the balcony the big, white cat that he belonged at the Lovejoy house. He thronged a convenient golf stick in its direction and returned to bed, but sleep was gone.

"To whom does the white cat that stays at your house belong?" Alderson asked a bit stiffly of Miss Nellie as he overtook her on her way home that afternoon.

"Snow Darling?" she smiled. "Oh, he belongs to Mrs. Gilman, an old lady who has made her home here so long, and we all make a pet of him," she went on in her musical tones.

"If he keeps up that after-midnight noise as he did last night and the night before," Alderson commented, "somebody'll make a corpse of him."

"Why, we—we didn't hear any noise," Miss Nellie remonstrated, "you must have been dreaming, Mr. Alderson."

Three nights went by before the white cat again surrounded the Coppell house. Then two nights together Alderson's rest was broken. At that time he was the only boarder who slept on that side of the house, and the only one who heard the caterwauling. At the end of the second night Alderson went to the Lovejoy house and remonstrated.

Miss Nellie was not at home, but Misses Euphemia and Jessie expressed their regret and promised to try to get Mrs. Gilman to keep "Snow Darling" in at night. Alderson went home somewhat mollified.

Unique Trophy.

The British royal standard which fills the center of the ceiling of a room at Annapolis is said to be the only British royal standard in the possession of a foreign nation. It was taken at the capture of York, Toronto, by Commodore Chauncey and General Montgomery, in 1813.

Disillusioned.

A novelist who had learned that a certain book seller was a great admirer of his works resolved to call up

Jonathan watched him uneasily as he took his departure.

"Er my ladies knowed what was good fur 'em," he commented, "dey'd invest in about a dime's worth o' 'Shonah-death-to-cats' and administer hit unbeknownst! But bein' ole mads, poah things, dey don't know dat when you give a man mad—he'll fahgit about bein' in de marryin' notion!"

Before breakfast next morning Alderson appeared at the Lovejoy house, tremulous with nervous anger. Miss Nellie opened the door. "I'm sorry if the kitty disturbed you," her soft voice was very sweet, "but Mrs. Gilman loves him so, she can't bear to restrain his liberty and fasten him up at night."

Alderson's exasperation broke out in mild fury. "Loves the pestiferous bunch of fur, does she? I love sleep, too, and I'm going to stay in the house where I am and get it! The next time that cat disturbs me, I'm going to restrain his liberty—with a bullet!"

"That wouldn't be right," quavered Miss Nellie.

Alderson turned abruptly and left her without another word.

He was not disturbed that night, but the next day he kept out of Miss Nellie's way. The night after, at the usual hour of half-past three, he was awakened by a feline wailing. He rose instantly. A single shot from his pearl-handled revolver and "Snow Darling" was no more.

Next day a very fat and exceedingly irate lady telegraphed her son to come to her. Jacob came. Alderson was fined in the police court and fined ten dollars for shooting Mrs. Gilman's cat.

"I'll go to jail and dry up before I pay that fine," he informed the court. "Sixty days in jail or the fine paid," answered the judge.

"I'll live on bread and water for the next two months in my cell before I will pay that fine," Alderson commented.

The town rang with the tale.

"De judge says dat Detroit man's a-gettin' pale and his rheumatism's comin' back on him—not gittin' his mineral baths and de water. He say he plumb onsey about him!" Miss Nellie overheard Jonathan saying to the cook about a week after Alderson's incarceration.

Suppose he died of the heat or something? For three nights Miss Nellie cried herself to sleep. Then she could stand it no longer. She went to the judge's office and paid Alderson's fine.

The judge, supposing that Alderson had requested his landlady to bring the money, to spare himself mortification, sent an order to the jailer: "Release T. M. Alderson. Fine paid."

"Judge said your fine was paid and to turn you out. That's all I know!" The jailer answered Alderson's remonstrance.

He went to the judge. "Who dared to pay that fine?" he demanded.

"Laddy brought it. Supposed you sent it by your landlady," answered his honor.

Fuming with anger, Alderson strode off in the direction of the woods across the river. In a thicket of pine trees prone on the pine needles, sobbing like a hurt child, he came upon Miss Nellie. At sight of the little disconsolate figure in the leaves he felt his anger cool. A twig broke under his feet. She sat up, shaking.

"Oh, don't be angry with me," she begged. "They said you were sick and suffering in that awful jail and I—I couldn't bear it! I went and paid your fine!"

With the touch of the wind, sweet with pine fragrance, in his flushed face and Miss Nellie's low sobs in his ears, Alderson's pride and obstinacy fled. Nothing mattered but that little white bundle at his feet. He bent over and lifted her.

"You were afraid I couldn't rough it out?" he said, very tenderly. "You thought I needed somebody to look after me? I do, and for all time! Won't you do it, little girl?"

BIG MEN OF AFGHANISTAN

Sethi Merchants, About Whom This Country Knows Little, Are People of Much Consequence.

The world is still a large place and contains a variety of men. The manufacturer who enters foreign trade makes many discoveries that were not disclosed in his school days. For example, in northwestern India he may meet the Sethi merchants, who conduct the trade of Afghanistan. These Mohammedan traders are men of consequence, and have their connections throughout Asia. Before Russia disintegrated they had branches in Petrograd and Moscow. They have their places of business in all the central Asia markets of importance, such as Bokhara and Tashkent, and buy and sell in Tientsin and Shanghai. Clearly such merchants are men of consequence in east territories and our own part of the world scarcely guesses at. To be merchandising that old banking, selling drafts on strange cities where a European bank would look as out of place as an Afghan caravan on the Lincoln highway.

These merchant-bankers of central Asia may add to their adventures if the Afghans persist in their warlike demonstrations against the British in India.

on the tradesman and introduce himself. Having done so, he noticed that the manager scrutinized him rather critically, but freely entered into conversation. When the novelist was about to depart he said: "Now you have met me, I suppose you will want to sell my books more than ever?"

"Perhaps I shall," was the answer, "but, all the same, I wish I had not seen you."

THE DARKEST HOUR

By JACK LAWTON.

As Lella sat, wide-eyed and sleepless before her bedroom window, the moon turned the sandy stretch of beach below into gleaming silver. For hours the girl had tossed restlessly upon her pillow, until at last she had arisen and dressed, hoping, when the last guest of the hotel retired within doors, to slip out unseen and settle her problem in the open silence of the night.

Money, not just enough to be comfortable in her own home, but money sufficient to satisfy all the pent-up desires of her heart. She might travel, she might see luxuriously the wondrous sights of the world; she might have at hand the whitest-red garden which had long been her dream—the monotonous office with its weary routine would be forever banished if she would but accept the conditions of her querulous old uncle's will; and its condition was a husband of his choosing.

Lella knew slightly this man whom her uncle favored with his choice, and the "knowing" had caused her sleepless night. Tomorrow she must give her answer, it was the last day of decree. She hated the chosen man's sneering smile, she hated the shrewdness of his cold eyes, but she knew that he would willingly enact his part, because of the prize in store.

It was like Uncle Jared to select such a man as custodian of his accumulated wealth; this new secretary had won the old man's admiration by his cautious cleverness, as Lella had won it, by her devotion through one of his illnesses.

Now the girl came slowly like a white wraith down the moonlit sands and seated herself there to wait the dawning. When the sun rose, shining across the waters, she must have made her decision. The breeze lifted gently, the curling ends of the long braid which hung over her shoulder, she had not waited to fasten up her beautiful hair for she was sure of being alone. Yet back among the purple shadows another figure moved at her approach.

"I beg your pardon," he said frankly, "I thought I should be quite alone here at this hour, or," he bent smiling to look into Lella's face—"have I surprised the spirit of morning?"

"I came—to settle a troubled question," she answered him seriously. "The moonlight seemed to point down this path and I also wished to be alone."

The man lingered. "Why, that was my case exactly," he said. "I was thrashing things out by myself up there in the hotel and my disappointment seemed too big for the indoors, so I brought it out."

"Disappointment?" queried the girl. All at once the stretching beach with its deep shadows was an alarming expanse in which to be alone. Childishly she longed for companionship and companionship was near. This very young man with the kind eyes might in some indirect way even help her in her decision.

"Disappointment?" she questioned again encouragingly and he dropped down beside her on the sands.

"Something," he began, "the hour, perhaps, or the sympathetic interest of your tone, urges me to be confidential."

"I have been studying most of my life, you see, with an object to accomplish—the central object of my future career. To the furtherance of this accomplishment has been held out to me an encouraging promise of financial support. I depended upon it for I knew that I could double the money bestowed. Without it, at present, I am helpless, and after years of laboriously getting the necessary money together it would probably be too late for the fulfillment of my dreams."

"Last night only I learned that the old friend who had been so enthusiastically interested in my enterprise and who had given the promise of his support, had died during my recent absence and had made a hasty will leaving all his property to a niece upon condition that she marry his latest secretary, one who had in some way gained the old man's favor. The will, of course, is just. Heretofore I had no knowledge of this niece's existence. My friend, Jared Long, died at this hotel a week ago. I came on here to learn details."

"The unexpected outcome of the will is merely one of life's disappointments. The bitter hardness of it to me lies in the fact of the failure forever of my achievement. Pardon me," ended the man abruptly. "I have been musing aloud and had almost forgotten my listener."

Tensely the girl leaned forward, a glimmer of light across the water shone in her eager eyes, her red lips parted breathlessly.

"And if," she asked, "this niece of old Jared's should refuse his request?"

"The property then would strangely revert to me," the young man replied.

Lella stood up before him. Like a freed creature she stretched her arms forth to the rising sun.

"The darkest hour," she murmured softly, "is just before the dawn. Perhaps your darkest hour of disappointment has already past. And mine—I wonder—?"

Smiling she looked up into the man's eyes.

"I want to see you again," he said suddenly, imperatively. "I must see you again."

Then side by side the two walked on together into the golden path of the sun.

"BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN"

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Ohio Woman.

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"I suffered from irregularities, pains in my side and was so weak at times I could hardly get around to do my work, and as I had four in my family and three boarders it made it very hard for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. I took it and it has restored my health. It is certainly the best medicine for women's ailments I ever saw."—Mrs. SARA SHAW, R. No. 1, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mrs. Shaw proved the merit of this medicine and wrote this letter in order that other suffering women may find relief as she did.

Women who are suffering as she was should not drag along from day to day without giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice in regard to such ailments, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its forty years experience is at your service.

A Catfish Story.

An old colored man at Jefferson City caught a two-pound catfish and was so well satisfied with his skill as a fisherman that he lay down and took a nap, with the fish beside him. Another mule came along soon after, picked up the fish and left a half-pound one in its place. When the colored man woke up the first thing his eyes sought was the fish, and it took him several seconds to realize what had happened. Then, turning the fish over and scrutinizing it very closely, he exclaimed: "Golly, how dat fish am shunkwint!"—Sedalia Bazoo.

His Eye on the Ball.

"And, Arthur," said the sweet young thing frowning a three-foot putt. "Yes, dear," came from the young man.

"After this game you are going to speak to father, are you not, of our engagement?"

"Yes, dear; and, believe me, I'm going to remember my game of golf and be exceedingly careful of my approach."—Youkers Statesman.

A Legal Point.

"My uncle left me only $5,000. Wonder if I could break his will."

"Sure thing! He must have been crazy to leave you anything."

A Michigan Case.

Alex. Peppier, blacksmith, W. Mich. St., Reed City, Mich., says: "Some years ago I was a physical wreck from rheumatic trouble. For four months I couldn't move without assistance. My limbs and back felt as though they were crushed. I had little control of the lower passages were painful. My head ached and I was dizzy. A friend told me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did. Eight boxes cured me."

A car load of charcoal belonging to the du Pont company caught fire Saturday morning and was discovered at about 5:30 a. m. The car was standing before the Michigan Central passenger depot. Fire Chief William Duclos ordered it hauled to the du Pont yards where it was extinguished by workmen. Fire in a car of charcoal is unusually difficult to extinguish. The use of water, say some of those who have had experience with such fires, has a tendency to increase the fire. It is stated that a pile filled with charcoal and drenched with water and covered will spontaneously burn within 24 hours.

LOSS OF APPETITE.
As a general rule there is nothing serious about a loss of appetite, and if you skip a meal or only eat two meals a day for a few days you will soon have a relish for your meals when meal time comes. Bear in mind that at least five hours should always elapse between meals so as to give the food ample time to digest and the stomach a period of rest before a second meal is taken. Then if you eat no more than you crave and take a reasonable amount of outdoor exercise every day you will not need to worry about your appetite. When the loss of appetite is caused by constipation as is often the case, that should be corrected at once. A dose of Chamberlain's Tablets will do it. Adv.

CRAWFORD COUNTY AGENTS COLUMN

A few DON'TS relative to the Grasshopper control campaign.
DON'T pay any attention to the fellow who says that the poison as furnished by the county and applied as per direction won't kill them.
DON'T put off sowing your poison. You have no other work on the farm quite as important as this, because if not attended to you will reap no crops.
DON'T be afraid to mix up five or six bushels and keep in a cool damp place and sow a bushel around the worst places each evening. If it has dried out any sprinkle some water on it before sowing.
DON'T go out in the middle of the day when the grasshopper is up on a carrot or cabbage and sow your poison around in the sand. The hopper will hardly come down from his perch to eat it under such circumstances. Sow it in the evening among the grass around the field or garden where they are bad so that when they come down from roosting on the grass, in the morning and are hungry, that it will be right under their noses. One bite of the bait and in thirty-six hours they are dead as sure as their names are grasshoppers.
DON'T sow the poisoned bait thicker than directions or put more poison in than the directions call for. It might then become dangerous to fowl and livestock. The amount the directions call for will kill them. This has been demonstrated in a hundred cases right here in these counties within the past ten days.

DON'T think you can get these little grasshoppers after they are dead and half burned up by standing up on your feet and casually looking at the ground. Get down on your knees and look under the matter June grass, weeds, sticks. Dig down into the roots of the grass and you will find them by the hundreds if you have paid attention and followed directions. They begin to die in about twenty-four to thirty-six hours after eating it.
DON'T fail to go back to your corn, milletman for more poison when you have used all that was assigned to you in the first place. If he has no more he should communicate with the County Agent as more will be furnished as long as it lasts. First come first served.
DON'T think that you are going to kill all the grasshoppers. If you can control them to the extent that they can keep ahead of them you will have cause for rejoicing.
DON'T neglect to look closely after your new seedlings as soon as you cut the grain from them, because the hoppers can take away a young seedling so quick that you will think the drought killed it. Brought has been blamed for killing many young seedlings in the past two years that the grasshopper got away with. Get busy and sow them.
DON'T neglect your old seedlings after cutting the hay. Many good meadows have been utterly ruined by grasshoppers eating out the crowns to such an extent that they never came on again.
DON'T fail to get in touch with the County Agent if you are not in an organized community. He is anxious to serve you.

DON'T forget that you can kill a thousand small grasshoppers with less effort than you can kill one hundred if you wait for them to get big enough to fly all over, altho you can not see the effects of your work as clearly. Keep after them daily.
DON'T forget that the farmers of Kalkaska county made a success of this method of Grasshopper Control last year, and if you don't it is your fault.
Posters are being put up and programs sent out for the joint Farm Bureau picnic to be held on July 18 at the Hanson Military reservation on Lake Margrethe, Grayling. There will be something doing every minute. Don't fail to sow your grasshopper poison the night before and let them eat it while you are eating your basket picnic dinner to the music of the Grayling Citizens' band.
The executive committee of the Crawford County Farm Bureau held its regular monthly meeting at their court house last Saturday. Several matters of interest and importance to the farmers were discussed.
Edw. Douglas of Lovells has used about 120 tons of limestone this year with various crops and is so impressed with the showings made that he says he would not plant anything any more without liming the land.
Probably one of the most enthusiastic grasshopper fighters put up by any community was that put on in Maple Creek last Thursday. About 35 of the farmers of that town turned out and made things lively for the hop-plot and scenes of the imagination show the water nymphs disporting themselves in deliciously cool looking waterfalls and seapools. Interpolated throughout the story are vocal numbers and a ballet.
